Gallery Invigilator

Gained an insight into stillness, and the formation of audiences around sculpture in a space. Mused over the flocking of people pre-pandemic. In quiet moments, considering the financial gain, for standing and breathing, finally a recipient of living wage. Utilising technology and mathematical skills to covertly get phone out and calculate £10.75/ hour, divided by 60mins= 0.17p/min, divided by 60secs=0.002p/sec. (living wage as of 2020) Taking 6mins on a toilet break = over £1.

Portfolio Assistant

Document signed to not speak about this.

Elf

Durational work performed seasonally from 2016-18. This work involved repetitively singing jingle bells, wrapping presents and a consistent jolly presence. Through layering maquillage of pink blush and glitter, the festive cheer and expressiveness of a naturally round face was heightened.

Shop Assistant

Durational piece set in 2011 as sales assistant in the vintage clothing department of the big Topshop/Topman, Oxford Circus- RIP. Through encounters in Sir Phillip Green's flagship emporium, with young audiences and the occasional celebrity memories and nostalgia of a past romantic time were evoked and young people were clothed in street armor fit for royalty. The resulting work was quite Princess Anne meets Princess Andre: Barbour jackets, sports tops, Pendleton shirts, wooly jumpers, American work wear, army Dead stock. *

*Since the downfall many have been claiming to have worked in this institution, as no one will be able to check references. However, I can certify that I genuinely worked here in a paid position, albeit below living wage and a few years after it was cool.
